Strange Disappearance of a Brooklyn School-Teacher.

Miss Wagner Left Her House at Daybreak Scarcely Clad.

Shor Threw Out Vague Hints About an Expected Visitor.

Brooklyn has another mystery: Miss Virginia M. Wagner, a prepossessing young school teacher, connected with Public School No. 45, left her home, 325 Clifton place, at daybreak on July 3 and has not been heard from since.

As far as known she wore nothing except her night clothing and a loose-fitting rubber circular. Where she went nobody knows, and her relatives and friends have been unable to gain the slightest clue as to her whereabouts.

The police have not been notified. No cause can be given for her disappearance. She had no love affair, and, indeed, she had no gentlemen visitors. She was always a quiet, modest girl, and her disappearance is all the more difficult to account for.

Miss Wagner rented a floor from S. M. Sanford, of 325 Clifton place, and boarded with Mrs. Swayne, of 474 Classon avenue.

Miss Wagner ate supper at Mrs. Swayne's on the night of July 2. It was raining, and she did not leave until after 9 o'clock.

Mrs. Swayne asked her to stay over night, but she refused. She wore a thin, white costume, and Mrs. Swayne insisted upon loaning the girl her water proof.

loaning the girl her waterproof.

'Throwing the garment over her shoulders she started out in the reiting rain storm. She had quite a distance to go, and when she arrived home Mrs. Sanford's family were abed. Mrs. Santord's son. Edward, heard her enter, but did not see her. Between 4 and 5 o'clock in the morning Mr. Santord heard Miss Wagner's door open and she ran downstairs and out of the front door.

The family commented upon the girl's action at the breakfast table, but nothing much was thought of it for two days. Then Mrs. Sanford began to grow anxious.

Up to this time she had imagined the girl had been stopping at Mrs. Swayne's, and she visited that lady. 'The latter was ignorant of the girl's wheresbouts and they started out to inquire among the neighbors, but withou ning the slightest clue as to where the girl ad gone. Then they made an examination of her room, and from its appearance it is judged the girl left in a hurry. None of her dresses were missing, and they concluded that she had gone away in her night-clothing, a red closk and Mrs. Swayne's waterproof. She also were a pair of thin slippers.

Miss Wagner's father is the agent for the Miss Wagner's father is the agent for the U.S. Express Company, at Patterson, N. Y., and he was immediately notified. He came on to Brooklyn, and interested some friends on to Brooklyn, and interested some triends in this case, and they began an active search, but two months have passed and no word from the girl has been heard. The Brooklyn Police were notified, the ex-cuse given being that the family objected to the relater coming out in the newspapers.

Mrs. Sanford, from whose house the girl disappeared, was seen by an Evening Wonld reporter this morning.

"Miss Wagner always seemed to be a quiet, cheerful girl and very studious,' When she came here in the latter part of April she hired the entire upper floor. She said she only needed one room, but she wanted to be by herself so that she might practise on the piano without disturbing any-

She had no male callers, but the day be fore her deputure she said that she expected a man to call to identify her. It was a small matter, she said, and a mere formality. The

"The only queer thing I noticed was that she slept in a hammock. Two days before she disappeared she asked me what I would say if she brought a husband to me. I replied that no one had a better right, and she added, laughingly, that she could live wall added, laughingly, that she could live well enough without having any tyrants around

Her father said that Virginia's mother died when she was very young, and when she was fifteen years old she had trouble with her aunt, and suddenly disappeared. She walked fourteen miles to a neighboring town and attempted to secure a situation as a domestic. "Her clothing is here just as she left it.

"Her clothing is here just as she left it, and I thought when school began she might come back; but I don't think we can have much hope now."

Mrs. Swayne, who keeps the boarding-house where Miss Wagner boarded, corroborated the story told by Mrs. Sanford.

Principal Jelliffe, of Public School 45, where Miss Wagner taught, spoke of her as a faithful teacher.

faithful teacher.

She only held a temporary appointment but she was certain of keeping her situation as long as she performed her duties satisas long as she performed her duties satisfactorily.

"She taught school in Patterson five years ago, and suddenly disappeared, but she afterwards returned all right.

"I am very sorry about the affair for she was a nice, quiet, lady-like teacher, and we liked her very much."

Miss Wagner was about five feet ten inches in height, was rather thin, and had brown hair and blue eyes. About a week before her mysterious departure she had her hair cut Pompadour, like a boy's.

The case is one of the most mysterious that have occurred in Brooklyn, and no doubt the police will now take a hand, but with two months, start of them they will have a hard time getting a clue.

scores of Articles of Ladles' Hose and Millinery Seized by the Custom-House Officers - He Says He Brought Them from Abroad for His Wife, but He Has None-Mrs. Ayer Repudintes Them.

A pretty collection of feminine frippery that Mr. Herbert C. Ayer tried to smuggle into this country on the steamship Eider lies n the Custom-House.

Mr. Ayer has gone to Chicago and will not be back before the middle of next week. Before leaving, however, he called at the Custom-House and explained that he did not know that he was violating the law in not declaring the articles seized dutiable.

He brought them over for his wife, he said to the Custom-House officers. Mr. Aver has crossed the ocean eight or nine times, and knew full well that he was violating the law. And he didn't bring them over for his wife, for he has none. Rumor said that Mr. Ayer obligingly hid the goods in his trunk to win the favor of a lady to whom he was very attentive on the voyage over.

Mr. Ayer was the husband of Mrs. Harriet Hubbard Ayer, of Recamier fame, and he figured rather unpleasantly before the public when he attempted to separate his wife from their little daughter Margaret.

He is the gentleman who decorated the irascible Ira Shafer's face with burnt cork in irascible Ira Shafer's face with burnt cora in the Manhattan Ciub a nttle over a year ago while the latter gentleman was sleeping.

Then Mr. Ayer put his own trunks in possession of the Custom-House officers, and Inspector Delaney found the following articles safely stowed away:

Forty pairs of kid gloves, thirty pairs of ladies' hose, half of which were cotton ind half stik: thirty-one neckties, twelve damask table covers, and a variety of napkins, hand kerchiefs, linen sheets and pillow cases, with a quantity of suspenders.

They were confiscated.

An Evening World reporter saw Mrs. Harriet Hubberd Ayer at her office this morning.

'Is the Herbert C. Ayer who was caught smuggling your husband, Mrs. Ayer?' asked the reporter.

Yes; that is he was," she replied, smilingly. He brought over a quantity of feminine

"I guess not," returned Mrs. Ayer, with a contemptuous toss of her blonde, curly head,
"But he says he bought them for his wife."
"Well, perhaps he has another. I have only seen him once in five years. No, sir, I only seen him once in five years. No, sir, I absolutely decline to accept any of his pres-

Mrs. Ayer thought it was a good joke on her late husband. She didn't know Miss Moore. She said that Mr. Ayer was probably going to Chicago to defend himself in a law-

Falls to Appear in Court and Her Counsel Pleads Not Guilty.

As soon as Mrs. Evangeline Hamilton gets through with Jersey justice, whether by acquittal on the indictment of atrocious assault upon Nurse Mary Ann Donnelly or after punishment on conviction of stabbing the woman, she will be brought over to this city and will be again united to Josh Mann, her affinity, and his precious mother, Mrs. Anna Swinton.

Double indictments have been found against all three of these perfumed rascals, male and female, for conspiracy to foist an beir upon Assemblyman Robert Ray Hamilton and for grand larceny in the second degree in mulcting the grandson of Alexander Hamilton out of $500 on the bogus baby racket.

A complete transcript of the evidence A complete transcript of the evidence against Mrs. Hamilton and her connection with the other two in the scheme to defraud her husband has been lodged with the District-Ationney at May's Landing, N J., and an officer is there awaiting her first moment of leisure, when she will be brought to New York on a bench warrant signed by Judge Martine.

Alfred Reed presiding.

Many persons interested in the Hamilton case were present hoping to catch a glimpse of the woman who has become so notorious in the plot against the well-known New York

A-semblyman, Capt. Perry, Mrs. Hamilton's counsel, asked and obtained the consent of the preasked and obtained the consent of the saiding Judge and prosecutor to enter a plea of not guilty on behalf of his client.

The reason assigned by him was the continued illness or Mrs. Hamilton, who is still confined to her bed with a severe attack of nervous prostration.

He said her physician deemed it injudicious to have her brought into court to-day, because of the trying ordeal to which she will be subjected at her trial to-morrow.
